ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In compiling this bibliography I received help and suggestions from many sources. The help was eagerly sought after and accepted. I would like to thank the entire staff of the Alaska Department of Fish and Game Subsistence Division, Anchorage Office. Especially helpful were Dr. James A. Fall, Ron Stanek, Lee Stratton and Carolyn Reed. All of these people opened their professional research libraries for my perusal and supplied me with a nearly steady stream of papers to be read, referenced and included in the bibliography. Dr. James Fall was particularly supportive of the project. His enthusiasm and comments were greatly appreciated, and his final review of the rough draft was essential. Dr. William B. Workman of the University of Alaska, Anchorage, generously opened his research library supplying many important recent publications and hard-to-find papers. Dr. Robert Wolfe, Research Director, ADFG Subsistence Division, supplied helpful comments on organizing search procedure. For graphics support I thank Betsy Sturm for her map work and Tim Sczawinski for cover artwork. Katherine Arndt deserves special recognition and thanks for her proficient job of editing. BookCrafters of Chelsea, Michigan handled the printing and binding of this volume. Lastly, I thank Dave Andersen who compiled the Northern Bibliography and acted as my immediate supervisor, for the constant support, spirited discussions and numerous revised keyword lists.
INTRODUCTION

This is the fourth in a series of regional bibliographies on subsistence in Alaska published by the Alaska Department of Fish and Game (ADF&G), Division of Subsistence. These publications are an outgrowth of a computerized literature data base compiled and maintained by the Division of Subsistence. What was developed by the Division as an in-house research tool attracted the attention of other agencies and individuals involved in land and resource management in Alaska. Numerous requests for access to the data base by computer users and nonusers alike and the desire of the Division to make this information available to other researchers have prompted the publication of these regional bibliographies as a first step in satisfying the need for an accessible, comprehensive reference data base on all aspects of subsistence in Alaska.

History of the Project

The Alaska Department of Fish and Game's Division of Subsistence was created by the Alaska legislature with enactment of Chapter 151 of the 1978 Alaska Session Laws. Among the Division's mandated responsibilities was the collection of information on all aspects of subsistence and its role in the lives of the residents of Alaska. To this end the subsistence bibliography project was developed to fill the need for a comprehensive reference data base on subsistence in Alaska. The ultimate goal of the project was the establishment of a computerized system for entry, storage, and retrieval of literature references.
pertaining to subsistence that would primarily serve the needs of the Division and the Department but would also be accessible to other users.

Title collection efforts on the project began in late 1979 and focused on Alaska's North Slope and Interior regions. In February 1982, title collection efforts were expanded to include the southern regions of the state. Citation collection for the southern half of Alaska focused initially on literature pertaining to Southcentral and Southwestern Alaska. Library sources at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, the University of Alaska, Anchorage, and Alaska Resources Library in Anchorage were searched as were the professional libraries of Division Resource Specialists. Literature search for publications concerning the Panhandle or Southeast Alaska began in August 1982, with the major library source being the Alaska State Library in Juneau. Currently the on-line data base totals about 4000 entries. Because of its size the data base is maintained in two parts, a northern collection and a southern collection. About 1500 titles currently make up the southern collection. The Southcentral bibliography is the first of three publications stemming from the southern data base. The Southwestern and Southeastern bibliographies are to appear in the near future. Future plans for the project include update and maintenance of the statewide data base and periodic updates to publish bibliographies when a sufficiently large volume of additional reference material has been identified.

Scope of the Bibliography

The current publication has a geographic focus in Alaska's Southcentral region. This area is bordered by the Alaska Range on the north and includes the Wrangell-St. Elias Mountains to the Canadian border in the east. On the coast, the boundary falls just west of Cape Yakataga. The central portion includes the Susitna Valley and Railbelt area. The western boundary encompasses the Stony River to its confluence with the Kuskokwim River, Lake Clark, Iliamna Lake and a thin strip of land down the east side of the Alaska Peninsula to Katmai National Park. Also included in the region are the Kodiak Islands in the Gulf of Alaska southwest of the Kenai Peninsula, and the Semidi Islands and Chirikof Island, both southwest of Kodiak Island. Major rivers in this region include the Copper River emptying into Prince William Sound, the Susitna and Matanuska rivers draining into Cook Inlet, and the Kenai River on the Kenai Peninsula. Lake Clark and Iliamna Lake are the two major freshwater lakes in the area. Oceanic bodies include Prince William Sound, Cook Inlet and Shelikof Strait between the Alaska Peninsula and Kodiak Island. These oceanic bodies are all part of the Gulf of Alaska and the Pacific Ocean. The coastal area from the Alexander Archipelago of Southeast Alaska to the Alaska Peninsula is known collectively as the North Pacific Rim.

Southcentral Alaska is the most developed area of the state and many communities, both historic and contemporary, exist within its boundaries. These settlements occur primarily along the coast and along major transportation routes. Figure 1 depicts communities for which references have been collected and which appear as keywords in the keyword index.

Several ethnic groups call Southcentral Alaska their home. Two Athabaskan groups reside in the area. These are the Ahtna Athabaskans in the Copper River Basin area and the Tanaina or Dena'ina Athabaskans whose population surrounds Cook Inlet and extends west to Lake Clark and Iliamna Lake and along the Stony River to its confluence with the Kuskokwim River. The Alutiiq (Sugpiaq) Eskimos settled along the coast, making their living principally off the sea. Two major subgroups of the Alutiiq are recognized: the Koniag Eskimo of the Kodiak Islands and the Chugach Eskimos in Prince William Sound and on the tip of the Kenai Peninsula. The Eyak Indians subsisted in the Copper River Delta and have very few representatives still living today. Figure 2 illustrates the linguistic divisions represented in Southcentral Alaska.

Subsistence involves complex interrelationships between economic, social, and cultural systems and between these systems and the environment. To have maximum utility to researchers, a reference collection on this subject must examine the many aspects of subsistence. In an attempt to provide a broad spectrum of information to researchers, title collection efforts were directed toward the following major subject areas:

1) subsistence hunting, fishing, trapping, and gathering;
2) physical, historical, social, economic, and demographic profiles of contemporary Alaskan communities;
3) the impacts of historic and contemporary development upon communities, culture, rural economies, and subsistence resources;
4) the distribution and movements of wild, renewable resources of Alaska;
5) diet, nutrition, and health of rural Alaskans, as they relate to hunting, fishing, trapping and gathering.
6) traditional Alaska Native culture, society, and sociocultural change; and

7) archaeological reconstructions of past land use patterns, resources utilized, and subsistence technologies.

Information that was not referenced included commercial fishing and hunting catch statistics, school attendance records and pure biology such as animal physiology or phenology of various native groups.

Sources and Collection Methods

Several library sources were utilized for the collection of titles. The Skinner Alaskana collection at the Elmer E. Rasmuson Library of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, the Alaska Resources Library, Anchorage, the University of Alaska Consortium Library, Anchorage, and the Alaska State Library, Juneau, were major contributors along with the professional libraries of Division Resource Specialists. Other library sources included Alaska Native Language Center Library (ANLC) at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, the Arctic Environmental Information and Data Center Library (AEIDC) in Anchorage, and the Alaska Department of Fish and Game Habitat Division Library, also in Anchorage. The research libraries of Dr. Jean Aigner of the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, Dr. William B. Workman of the University of Alaska, Anchorage, and Dr. Gerald H. Clark of the USDA-Forest Service in Juneau proved invaluable in the search for materials relevant to the subsistence way of life in Alaska. Methods of search included author and subject searches in the library card catalogs, examinations of existing bibliographies, and perusal of periodicals such as Anthropological Papers. of the University of Alaska, Arctic Anthropology, Arctic, Ethnohistory, Occasional Papers of CPSU, and Dissertation Abstracts. Twenty northern bibliographies were consulted. Especially useful were Eskimo Acculturation by A. E. Hippler, Ethnographic Bibliography of North America, by G. P. Murdock and T. J. O'Leary, and A Bibliography on Alaskan Subsistence by M. A. Tuten and J. M. Eckhardt. Also useful were the localized bibliographies such as Koniag-Pacific Eskimo Bibliography by D. W. Clark and Subarctic Athabascans: a Selected Annotated Bibliography by A. E. Hippler and J. R. Wood. The keyword "bibliography" in the keyword index will direct the user to the individual bibliographies used.

When a pertinent reference was located it was cited, examined for keywords and abstracted within the scope of this bibliography. The bibliography of that reference was then examined for additional sources which were then located, cited and searched in the same manner. A particular title was examined for potential inclusion in the bibliography if the reference appeared to deal directly with specific subsistence activities or offer information that might be useful to subsistence researchers. For example, the publication Tyonek Moose Utilization by Dan Foster would be an obvious reference to examine for inclusion, as it directly concerns traditional uses of natural resources. On the other hand, D. E. Dumond's paper Prehistoric Pottery of Southwestern Alaska would not be examined because the basic pottery designs and the movement of creative design does not deal directly with subsistence. Similarly, H. D. Anderson's dissertation A Social Study of the Alaskan Eskimo would be examined because the current economy and social status of the Alaskan Native is intimately tied to subsistence activities, whereas Identification, Documentation and Delineation of Coastal Migratory Bird Habitat in Alaska by P. D. Arneson would not be included because it offers no apparent direct information related to subsistence activities. Primary references such as the exploration chronicles of H. T. Allen and the translated and published journals of various employees of the Russian American Company were examined and included since they contained information on the Native traditional livelihood prior to extensive European contact.

Organization of the Bibliography

Each bibliographic entry consists of author, date, title, publisher, keyword, and, in most cases, an abstract. Only references that were located and examined were abstracted. Abstracts have been kept brief to enhance cost effectiveness. The cost of computer searching is a function of the size of the collection to be searched. Therefore attention was focused on the effective choice of keywords rather than on the creation of lengthy abstracts. The bibliography is not annotated in the sense of offering a detailed description and evaluation of contents. Rather, it is designed to provide the user with potentially pertinent material through the use of keywords. Some keywords listed in a citation are not referenced in the keyword guide. This is because the entire collection has been drawn from a statewide data base and therefore contains keywords pertinent to regions other than Southcentral Alaska.
Citations are arranged alphabetically by author, and multiple works by a single author are listed in chronological order. Joint authors are listed last name first and separated by a semicolon. The FAMULUS program, which is very effective in organizing, indexing, and searching the computerized data base, has very specific format requirements. The use of all upper-case text and the presence and organization of the AUTH, DATE, TITL field descriptors is a result of FAMULUS requirements. Each citation also has been assigned a sequential citation number by FAMULUS which is used for referencing in both the keyword and author indices.

Using the Bibliography

Apart from browsing through the citations, primary access to the bibliography is through the author and keyword indices. The author index provides an alphabetical listing of author names. Following each name are the citation numbers in which that individual was cited as an author or joint author. The numbers refer to references in the bibliography and are located by finding the number in the body of the bibliography. The keyword index is an alphabetical listing of subjects pertaining to subsistence systems in Southcentral Alaska. Following each keyword is a list of citation numbers in which that keyword was used. Cross-referencing two or more keywords allows the user to "fine-tune" a search of references covering specific subject areas. In addition, the "see also" references direct the user to similar or additional keywords pertaining to that topic. The user should carefully examine the keyword index to see the variety of search terms available.
The following example will illustrate the use of the bibliography and keyword index. If we are interested in references which examine the annual cycle of subsistence activities in the village of Tyonek, two obvious keywords to begin our search might be SUBSISTENCE CYCLE (p. 127) and TYONEK (p. 129). Turning to those words in the keyword index, we notice that both terms provide us with a good selection of citation numbers. By cross-referencing the citation numbers under these two keywords we can focus on the desired information. This cross-referencing process is illustrated below in figure 3. By using the keywords SUBSISTENCE CYCLE and TYONEK, we find five citation numbers that match: 149, 150, 151, 162, 443. Our selected keywords have directed us to five citations to which we can turn in the bibliography and examine more closely. Some topics may require cross-referencing three or more keywords, while more general topics might be researched using a single keyword or using several keywords independently.

Few bibliographies, if any, can claim to be complete on any given subject, especially one as broad as subsistence. The goal of any bibliographer should be to assemble enough literature on a subject to be of some value to others in that field. The greatest testimony to the success of that effort is an often-used copy of his or her work on some easy-to-reach shelf. Toward that end I hope this collection is useful to those involved in subsistence research.

          OVERVIEW OF THE ENVIRONMENT, PREHISTORY, HISTORY, AND CULTURE OF ALL NORTH AMERICAN SUBARCTIC INDIAN GROUPS. OVER THIRTY ETHNIC GROUPS FROM ALASKA AND CANADA ARE DESCRIBED IN
"TRIBAL SUMMARY" by noted ethnographers. Much emphasis is placed on the subsistence cycle, subsistence activities and subsistence technology of these traditional hunting peoples. Group delineation, culture change and inter-cultural relationships are also examined. Predominantly a series of portraits of traditional culture with brief mention of contemporary status. Includes excellent photographs and a 60-page bibliography.
