GREENPEACE FAIR

Letter to MCA from the Alaskan office of Greenpeace:

Dear Friends:

October 12, 1978

Greenpeace is an international organization concerned with the cessation of the commercial whaling operations now being conducted by the Russian government and Japanese fleets against decimated whale populations.

(Greenpeace Fair cont.)

An Alaskan office has recently been opened in Anchorage. It's first fund-raising activity is sponsoring a festival on December 2nd at Central Junior High School. Along with an auction, movies, children's events, vegetarian delights and live music, there will be limited numbers of spaces for artists interested in selling their work. Your help in spreading the word among the local artistic community is appreciated.

Artists interested in booth space, please contact the Greenpeace office at 277-5922 or myself at 279-7049. Thanks for your time and cooperation.

ADVENTURE AWAITS!!!

Two exciting climbing possibilities have been brought to the attention of the MCA. If your looking for adventure, winter or summer, look no further than SCREE.

Mexican Volcanos and Beaches

Climb the Mexican Volcanos this Christmas and/or sit on the beach:

I am leading a group to Mexico to climb the three volcanos, all over 17,000'. After the climb we can travel to the Yucatan and relax on the beach. Climbers must have previous glacier experience and high altitude experience is helpful. Hikers are welcome to base camp and to the beach. The climb will take 6-10 days; we'll stay on the beach until well sunburned or we get bored. Call Craig Renkert. 277-9783 evenings or leave name and number at meeting. We will have an organizational meeting before Thanksgiving. Thanks.

Climbing in the U.S.S.R.

The American Alpine Club has sent a letter to the MCA detailing the summer climbing camps in the U.S.S.R. which are available to American Climbers. A short summary is shown here and more information can be obtained by contacting Ken Blue at 337-3164 from 10:00 AM till 2:30 PM or by looking over the information at the November meeting.

The Ascent Of Anotherdam Peak El Rojohombre

Bumdum Peak had been conquered. What, of significance, remained to be done after that bold climb? Then rumors of a massive peak of snow-encrusted granite hiding its awesome bastions in the cloud-choked depths of the Coast Range. Anotherdam Peak, rising 4900 feet above the iceberg-strewn Tracy Arm Fjord, began to lure climbers forth.

The ferocious leader of the Bumdum Expedition, returned from social climbing, began organizing an expedition to this foreboding massif. The rest of the team was composed of three. Two were fine rock climbers who had climbed in that great country of America. No rock face had yet been able to withstand their crazed assaults. The last member of this potent team had scaled many horrendous snow peaks. For this climb he borrowed a hammer.

Base camp was set on the intimidating west ridge of our chosen peak. A morning dawned and a climb began. The sun, seldom seen in this massed-draped country, sneaked into the sky. Packs were slung amid nervous farewells as the four were off to a fine alpine start at 9:00 AM.

Great cornices, grimly promising the ultimate journey to the unwary, hung out two or three feet from the ridge. Sweeping snow slopes, reaching 20 or 30 degrees were crossed with constant care and belays. This led us to the first rock band.

Our rock experts huddled--5.11, A-6, Grade 7 was the consensus. Being the ethical purrists that we were, we attacked that gruesome six to eight foot pitches without a single cowardly piton, chock, or runner. On to the top of the first gendarme. Our knees weakened as we searched for the route to the col. The route would go, but we would first have to push some rock obstacles over the sheer north face.

Down and yet up again to the next exhausting gendarme. The technical difficulties were immense but we persevered and crawled, finally, over the final treacherous moss slope and 15° rock precipices. Our limits had well been passed but a roast beef sandwich and a beer put us back on our feet and stomping doggedly onward. Our ridge was sharply knife-edged--only fifteen or twenty feet wide. And it seemed endless since we were all suffering from knife-edge ridge lassitude.

The first ascent of Anotherdam Peak was almost accomplished, but first, a final sweeping face soaring up a full thirty feet at an impossible angle of 50° . We attacked that face with visions of that imposing first ascent and forced its crest. And there was the summit upon which our reputations would soar. But a shriek and a sobbing climber in the snow. Beside us....TRACKS! Tracks in the snow. We were not first but second! Grizz bear had attained our hard fought summit only that morning making our ascent the...THIRD! We were utterly crushed at the sight of tracks left by yet another summit climb. The two goats, local climbers, had blitzed the east face making our epic climb nothing more than an abysmal third ascent. The two rock climbers flung themselves over the north face in anguish and I would have followed suite had I not stopped to look at the view.
