TRIP REPORTS

December 21, 1996

by Cory Hinds

Eight MCA members participated in this annual sleepout on top of Flattop Mountain. Judging by some of the arrival times, it seems that some MCA members had pioneered new routes up the mountain. Some members pitched tents while others used bivy sacks.

What we thought would be a windy night turned out to be quite calm. The moonlight was incredible shining off the snow and many shooting stars were visible; stragglers from the recent meteor shower? A healthy supply of wood was packed up and we got a good fire going and roasted marshmallows in fine tradition. (Our president attempted to feed us marshmallows saturated with hydrocarbons from the Duraflame logs, but most folks waited until the real wood caught). We discussed expedition plans for the spring and toasted the Russians who were just beginning their winter attempt at Denali.

1997 Membership Dues are due now !!

The training committee is planning to provide on-going mini-workshops in addition to the traditional glacier travel in spring and ice climbing in fall at the Matanuska Glacier. The workshop could be a short evening session during week (we know how busy you are on weekends) or very informal study group discussion or ..

The possible subject of training are as follows:

Avalanche beacon/rescue practice, Snow shelter, Self-arrest, Snowshoeing, Avalanche awareness, Cross-country skiing, Knot-tying, Placement of protection (rock and ice), Crevasse Rescue, Glacier travel, Orienteering (map and compass), Rock climbing, Stream crossing, Belaying, Camping/Backpacking, Ice climbing, Backcountry first aid/CPR, Expedition planning.

If you are interested in becoming a part of this new idea in any capacity i.e. student, instructor, guru, mentor or just having fun and increase your knowledge in mountaineering, please contact with the committee chairperson Aze Azegami at:

Library News

The following is a list of new additions to the MCA library:

DENALI SOLO, by Ed Darack

MEDICINE FOR MOUNTAINEERING, fourth edition, edited by James Wilkerson

ALASKA ASCENTS, world class mountaineers tell their stories. by Bill Sherwonit

CHEATING DEATH, survival stories from Alaska. by Larry Kaniut

HIGH ALASKA, a historical guide. by Jonathan Waterman

HEROIC CLIMBS, a celebration of world mountaineering. edited by Chris Bonnington

BEYOND RISK, conversations with climbers. by Chris O'Connell

IN THE ZONE, epic survival stories from the mountaineering world. by Peter Potterfield.

I would like to thank the club membership for voting to allocate the funds which made these recent purchases possible. Also we are looking for volunteers to go through the library and make a listing of all publications currently on the shelves. A laptop computer would make the job pretty easy. The most difficult part would be keeping on task and not be distracted by all the great book titles. Mac format preferred. Any interested book worms out there please contact me at 345-5512.

Letter from a Small Island

by Jonathan Rose
December 1996

On writing, thoughts of who cares? On climbing, thoughts of who dares? Middle of middle Scotland and death defying accounts of knife edges in the Wrangles, avalanches in the St. Elias. Thoughts of everyone is doing it. Scree strut your stuff. 24 trips offered, 1482 member trip days done; sit back and relax; feel proud.

Blending into the scenery and the advancing years, the armchair adventure stretches as far as thumbing past editions of mountaineering club journals; like a trip down memory lane spinning the 20 year old vinyl, a pleasant taste for a short time but the appetite is soon satisfied. And this came out in Latin in 1981 - Fools are tortured by the memory of evils, but memory is a jog to the wise for by memory they taste again the pleasure of the past (stick that in your back pocket to fire at whiners).

All of this thumbing takes on a deeper hue as the threads bind. Clubs are the people; what is put in and what comes out; a record of activity, of what they do together; the place and the pinnacle are important only for the moment. Photos capture that fleeting moment of position. Words tell the facts and feelings. Behaviour and aspiration are the lasting legacy - we did it before so more and better - please.

And what of 1996?. All burdened by the encumbrance of security, challenge, diverse thrill and responsibility, 24 each day is not enough. Must cut down on something - as usual it is adventure. This is part of blending into the scenery with advancing years. At least the spirit is willing. Through The Lasting Legacy I know I'm not immortal. Thrills come from elsewhere without the young man growing up part. Deep breath and don't fret at turning away from the route when the temperature is low. No audience these days. Too many guidebooks and too few climbing buddies for a slyly revealed tick to satisfy. Just enjoy the day out and revel in the fact that you're there. Night time bike to camp spot, day time hike to mountain; the first snow of the season in October. Fifteen miles from the nearest road and just a few people. Blueberries naked without leaves - what are they doing there?

Warm days down south on the crags that are classics, but which have satisfied in the past. We always do Little Chamonix but do it again to make sure. Up the unimpressive slabs and then whoosh, swing out over nothingness on holds the size of Prince Charles' ears. Always the same on wet days; willing the drizzle into submission and treading the fine line between give up for ever and committing a life to the sport.

Moving house doesn't score high on the adventure scale; we did plenty of it. Engaging builders likewise. Touring old haunts and meeting new people, a bit warmer. Making plans for trips in 1997 is nearly hot. Back to Alaska will keep me going during the dark days when snow is slush and the days pass like hours.

A happy Christmas to you all, Jonathan.
