Trip Reports

Wolverine Peak in the Full Moon By Amy Murphy

ack in November, Katie Hahn and I climbed Wolverine Peak during the full moon and, despite encountering very strong winds, enjoyed the hike so immensely we wanted to do it again during December's full moon. Lousy weather conditions prevented us from doing the hike in December, so we anticipated doing another trip during the January full moon. We planned the night hike for January 26 and were rewarded with good weather and clear skies! Katie Hahn, John Recktenwald, Ray Nabinger, Ron Gehres and myself met at the Prospect Heights parking lot at 5:30 to excitedly begin our evening's journey.

Since we hadn't had much new snow, the trail was well packed and easy to travel on, so we were able to set a good pace. As we turned off the main trail onto the Wolverine trail, we wondered when we were going to see the moon, as it hadn't risen yet. We stopped to take a break at the big rock sitting on the edge of the open meadow area and took a few minutes to view the twinkling lights of Anchorage down below us. From there we started the uphill climb, heading for the center ridgeline that leads to the summit ridge. We encountered some slick, icy conditions on the slope leading up to the ridge, but the conditions didn't warrant putting our crampons on yet. We didn't stop when after we reached the cairn on the main ridgeline, deciding to keep pushing our way on up. We still hadn't seen the moon, so Ray teased Katie and I about leading him on a wild goose chase to see the full moon!

We finally stopped to take a break and put our crampons on at a spot right below the rocks at the intersection of the center ridgeline and the summit ridge. The moon was still being elusive, but we knew it was only a matter of time before it finally appeared. We hiked up to the summit ridge and were finally rewarded with the view of the full moon, illuminating everything around us. Of course we had to start howling at the moon, out of sheer enjoyment of the magical beauty of the glowing, moonlit scenery! We continued up the summit ridge to the summit, where we took a good long break so we could kick back and soak up the good feelings and outstanding views of the mountains, snowfields and valleys all around us. We were extremely pleased that there was no wind – now how rare is that?

We finally decided to turn around and head back down, but since nobody was in a hurry and the evening, scenery and camaraderie were so enjoyable, we stopped to take another long break down near the rocks at the top of the center ridgeline. We checked out routes on some of the mountains to the northeast of us in anticipation of a future peak-bagging trip in the area this summer, including Tikishla, the Tanainas, Koktoya, Temptation and Williwaw. It's amazing how clearly you can see things when the moon is shining so brightly! Plus, you save money on batteries as you don't even need to use headlamps.

While we were sitting there, a ghostly apparition arose up over the rocks and clambered towards us, which was a little surprising, to say the least! I realized it must be Allison Sayer, who said she would arrive at the trailhead late but would hike up the trail to meet us. So we sat and chatted with Allison for a few minutes before we all reluctantly headed back down. We walked down the big snowfield to the north of the center ridgeline, which was definitely much easier than hiking down the slick, ice-coated rocks and ground on the ridgeline. We returned to the trailhead around 11:30 p.m. and agreed that we should start planning monthly moonlight MCA hikes since it is such an enjoyable, almost-mystical experience.

O'Malley Peak Winter Hike By Amy Murphy

In January 29, 2005, MCA President Steve Parry led a trip up O'Malley Peak, one of the 12 peaks over 5,000' in the Chugach front range. Amazingly, 24 people signed up for the trip, but luckily the trip ended up only having 14 participants, including Steve and three assistant trip leaders. Having more than 20 people could have presented some challenges, but one really neat thing about this trip was the large number of "new faces" who showed up. It's always great to meet new MCA members who come on these trips!

We met at the Carrs Huffman coffee shop around 8:30 in the morning and carpoled up to the Glen Alps parking lot. Steve checked to make sure everybody had crampons and ice axes and warm clothing, as we were expecting cold temperatures. We left the parking lot and headed for the trail that leads up to the Ballfield area. I felt a little guilty because we were hiking on newly-groomed ski trails and leaving footsteps, but the Powerline Pass trail is a multi-use trail so I knew other hikers, bikers and skiers would soon be out tracking up the trail. We stopped to put our crampons on at the bottom of the snow-filled gully that leads up to the Ballfield. We probably could have walked up the gully without crampons, but Steve had everybody put crampons on just to be safe and to get more practice walking with them on.

Some of the O'malley gang, by Lee Whitten

Once we got to the top of the gully, we sat down to wait for everybody to get to the top and removed our crampons for the hike up the Ballfield. There wasn't much snow up in the Ballfield as a lot of it had been blown away, so we had pretty easy walking. We stopped at the base of the big snow gully that is one of the most-popular routes to get up O'Malley to put our crampons back on. We also got our ice axes out and ready to use, and then spread out and started to climb up the gully. Luckily the snow was hard-packed and stable so we didn't have to worry about avalanche danger. However, the snow was soft enough to allow us to kick steps in as we ascended to the top of the ridgeline, which is always helpful!

We stopped right below the top of the gully to eat lunch as we could hear the wind howling at the top of the ridgeline. We knew we should eat while we could find some shelter from the wind, as we had a long, windy ridgeline to traverse before arriving at

2006 MCAK Calendar

The Calendar Committee has decided that it is in the interest of the MCA calendar that the project be moved forward in the year for the 2006 calendar so that calendars may be sold to the summer tourist. It is hoped that this larger market will allow us to produce more calendars at higher quality and lower unit cost. What this means is rather than starting the project in September we will start it at the March General Meeting. Please bring your VERTICAL photos to the March or April Meetings. We hope to have them on the wall for voting at the May Meeting. Please have your name and phone number on the back. We recommend 8 by 10's which can be done for $2 at Costco, but will accept anything. Most any Alaskan mountain culture shot will be accepted.

Vertical shots are needed for the next MCAK Calendar (Ripple by Carlene Van Tol)

the summit. As we were sitting there eating lunch and enjoying the day, Ross Noffsinger and his two dogs climbed up the snow gully and joined us. After eating, we climbed to the top of the gully and headed east along the ridgeline up and over towards the summit.

Along the way we made numerous stops wait for people and to marvel at the steep, sheer drop-offs on the north side of the ridgeline. If somebody fell through a cornice or slipped and fell the wrong way, they would sure have a long drop to the bottom of the valley floor! Lee Whitten and John Recktenwald both know I love to slide down snowfields, and they thoughtfully pointed out a couple of really steep, snow-filled gullies they just knew I would love to slide down. Ha! I'm glad they are my friends, helpfully(?) pointing out something fun and exciting for me to do, or I would have thought they were trying to get rid of me! I hadn't even started singing on this trip yet, so I don't know why they would have wanted me to make a quick exit from their presence, unless it was due to a very few teasing (harassing) comments I may have made.

Anyway, after a seemingly-long but scenic ridge walk, we finally made it to the summit and sat and waited for everybody to join us. We enjoyed the stunning views of all of the peaks surrounding us and took lots of photos. We became chilly after sitting around in the strong winds for a while and decided not to wait any longer for the other two people who hadn't yet made it to the summit. On our way back we came upon the two other hikers, Jim Szender and Chuck Kennedy, and learned that Chuck decided he couldn't make it to the summit. However, Jim wanted to continue on to the summit, so I offered to be the sweep and hike back with Chuck.

The group waited for Chuck, Jim and I at the top of the snow gully where we had stopped for lunch. The sun had finally broken through the clouds and was shining all around us and it helped make a great day even better! We descended this gully and hiked over to the less-steep snow gully that leads down from the Ballfield. I think just about everybody sat and slid down this gully, whooping and hollering and really enjoying life! Then we headed back to the parking lot and thanked Steve for leading another fun trip.

Re: Snowmachine use on Eagle Glacier

Dear Ms. Paquet:

Glacier City Snowmobile Tours has submitted a proposal to move their summertime operation from Spencer Glacier to Eagle Glacier near the Nordic Training Center. I understand they are requesting an opening of approximately 3 square miles for a "handful" of snowmachines, and that access to the glacier will be via fixed wing and helicopter.

The Eagle Glacier lies north of Girdwood and is a part of the Eklutna Traverse, a 40-mile glacier traverse across three glaciers, with three huts along the way. The Mountaineering Club of Alaska maintains the huts. Although Glacier City is claiming that their operation will not interfere with the mountaineering route, and they claim they will not be going near the huts, we ask you to not grant permit for snowmachines on Eagle glacier.

This company currently has a permit to operate on the Spencer glacier. We would like to see them stay there, or find another alternative, rather than be allowed on the Eagle glacier/Eklutna traverse. Snowmachines are not compatible with the backcountry experience mountaineers seek while skiing the Eklutna traverse. We do not believe there will be adequate monitoring of conditions of the permit, and that there will be problems having two different types of users in one area.

Thank you for your careful attention to the above matter.

Sincerely,

Carlene Van Tol, Secretary

Re: Spring meeting, 2005
Proposals 67-73; 99-102; 129

Dear Board Members:

The Mountaineering Club of Alaska wishes to comment on the above proposals as they concern Chugach State Park.

Members of the Mountaineering Club of Alaska enjoy mountain climbing, skiing, and hiking, in addition to other outdoor activities. The MCA was organized in 1958 and has grown to approximately 350 members. Club members may participate in club trips, club training programs, and the maintenance of our backcountry huts. We publish a monthly newsletter for members, and have monthly meetings that are well attended.

Chugach State Park is the area in which MCA members spend a lot of their time. This is due to the spectacular nature of the area in addition to its close proximity to Anchorage, where the majority of members live. There are inherent dangers posed by hunters to hikers with the presence of gut piles at kill sites near trailheads, which could attract bears, thereby endangering the public. Also, the use of leg hold traps could endanger pets in the heavily used park.

At our general membership meeting on February 16, 2005, we discussed the matter of various proposals to modify hunting and trapping regulations within Chugach State Park. A resolution was introduced and passed by the general membership requesting that hunting and trapping regulations not be changed as they relate to the park.

The current regulatory scheme provides for various controlled areas and prohibitions. Hunting and trapping of some species is permitted, but various restrictions apply, including the requirement that a hunter obtain a permit, numbers of which are limited. The MCA asks that these controlled areas, prohibitions, and restrictions not be changed.

Thank you for your careful attention to the above matter.

Sincerely,

Carlene Van Tol, Secretary
Mountaineering Club of Alaska

MCA Trip Classifications

The classifications below do not take into account individual trip hazards such as river crossings, scree slopes, snow fields, bears, etc. Trip leaders are required to inform the trip participants of any such hazards either verbally, on the sign-up sheet, or in the trip description. Leader approval is required for participation on all trips. NON-TECHNICAL: Following are a few standards used to classify nontechnical trips. The classification is made in terms of hiking distance and altitude gain. Many trips are not on established trails.

CLASS A: Easy hikes with a maximum distance of 8 miles for day trips or 4 miles per day for overnight trips. Altitude gain up to 1200 feet.

CLASS B: Trips involving a maximum distance of up to 12 miles for a day trip or 6 miles per day for an overnight trip. Altitude gain of 1200 to 2500 feet.

CLASS C: Trips up to 15 miles for a day hike or 8 miles per day for an overnight trip. Altitude gain up to 3500 feet. Scree, steep grass or other rough terrain problems may be encountered.

CLASS D: Hikes and climbs with an altitude gain of over 3500 feet or a distance of greater than 15 miles for a day-hike or greater than 8 miles a day for an overnight trip. Peaks in this classification may require minimal climbing skills.

CLASS E: Hazardous climbing conditions or stream-crossing conditions may be encountered. A basic mountaineering course may be required.

TECHNICAL: Technical trips are open to all qualified climbers. However, the registration on any particular trip must be restricted to a safe and manageable number of climbers. Registration is made directly with the leader, who determines the qualifications needed for the trip.

GLACIER TRAVEL: Trips requiring roped travel over glaciers. Knowledge of crevasse rescue, and ice axe and crampon skills are required. Basic understanding of ice and snow anchors also required.

FIFTH CLASS: Trips which involve fifth class climbing. A Basic Mountaineering course or equivalent is required. Knowledge of belay and rappel techniques and placing anchors is required. Climbing difficulty varies widely with each trip.

TRIP PARTICIPANTS have the obligation to acquaint themselves with the nature of the trip and to verify that it is within their capability and experience. Anyone wishing to participate in any trip above CLASS A must have completed one or more trips of the next lower classification, or the equivalent.

Approved: MCA Board, February 15, 2000
