Deponents are requested to bring with them to this deposition the records indicated on the subpoena duces tecum which we have agreed to exchange on November 30, 1990.

Defendants have engaged in an extended process of good faith negotiation with Plaintiffs' Discovery Committee, attempting to schedule this deposition. that deponents' records may raise issues of confidentiality and privacy. Therefore, Defendants have no choice but to issue this mandatory notice of deposition.

It is now abundantly clear to the court from the Fund's statement (Clerk's Docket No. 1062) that plaintiff Lakosh has filed a claim with the Fund. The Fund is actively considering that claim; and indeed, the Fund has solicited additional information from Mr. Lakosh to aid in its review of that claim. It is clear that the Fund has not yet made any determination with respect to the claim in question.

In fact, what Mr. Lakosh seeks to accomplish by the subject motion for appeal is to review a rejection of a claim which he presented to Exxon Shipping Company pursuant to a private agreement between the Fund and Exxon Shipping Company. Mr. Lakosh has cited no authority, and the court is aware of no authority, which would make Exxon Shipping Company's decision to reject a private claim by Mr. Lakosh subject to review in this court. The regulations of the Fund have no application to such informal decision-making by Exxon Shipping Company. When the Fund acts upon Mr. Lakosh's claim, and if he is dissatisfied with the result, then he may appeal the decision of the Fund to this court pursuant to 43 C.F.R. § 29.9(i).

Plaintiff Lakosh's motion for appeal of denial of claim by Exxon Shipping Company is denied.

DATED at Anchorage, Alaska, this 7 day of December, 1990.
